👤 PROFILE

Dr. Archana Voola is a social policy researcher and practitioner interested in interdisciplinary research on gender, social justice, poverty and inequality. With professional work experience in higher education sector such as University of Sydney, University of New South Wales and University of Notre Dame, she has engaged with multiple stakeholders – students, government and industry partners – to develop curriculum, performance measurement and ensuring governance within departments. Additionally, she has worked within the not-for-profit sector such as Mission Australia, producing key policy documents as well as managing reporting tasks.

As founding member of Academics Stand Against Poverty (ASAP) Oceania Chapter, a coalition of academics from Australia and New Zealand focusing on poverty eradication, Dr. Voola has provided thought leadership on conducting Poverty Audits of the major political parties in Australia. Her research has been translated into publications in areas includes marketing strategies for social impact, gender equality strategies, anti-poverty program evaluations, comparative social policy and the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals.

Archana has strong project management skills, expertise in qualitative research methods and the capacity to translate research findings for a range of audiences, including academics and policy-makers. Her work is underpinned by her passion to be a voice for the voiceless, and Mahatma Gandhi's quote best encapsulates her ethos 'Be the change that you want to see in the world'.
